TOO MUCH PATRIOTISM.

"Farrel," said the Fifty-seventh Street Court magistrate yesterday to a gray-haired old man charged with drunkenness. He did not answer. "Farrel," repeated the Court, with indignation. "Is it me you mane?" asked the prisoner.

"Yes."
"Well, I have an 'O' to my name."
"Well, I have an 'O' to my name."
"O'Farrel, then, you were drunk."
"Droonk I may have been, sir; but, damme, I've never been asliamed of an Irish handle to my name."
"That's right, sir, and since you're so patriotic we'll excuse your offence this time."
This conversation had proved of great interest to another occupant of the prisoner's bench, who now, with smiles wrinkling his ruddy complexion, stepped forward.

"Reilly, you were also drunk. What have you to say?" asked the Judge.

"He, he," snickered the ruddy complexioned man.
"It's odd, but you've missed an 'O' in my name, too."

"Ah, I see. You're patriotic also. But then it's well to send an example of such goodness to the Island. Six months."
